The Bibliography, Part I of the compilation here presented, contains, in addition to the guides and bibliographies, a selection of the more important works cited in the chapters of the Syllabus. A number of books in the general field of American history and all titles taken from periodicals are omitted from the Bibliography. It seemed unnecessary to list the former, while the periodical literature is sufficiently described in the Syllabus itself. The scheme of classification used in the Bibliography is given in the table of contents.

In the Syllabus, or Part II, we have attempted a chronological and topical outline of Southern history from the period of exploration through Reconstruction, and have sought to give due weight to all the factors, political, social, economic, and racial, that have contributed to the molding of Southern life and character. The necessity of conserving space and the fact that Southwestern history has become a field in itself, led us to give but slight attention to that section.

It was beyond the financial resources at our disposal to include a detailed index. That given covers the bibliography and the more significant periodical literature cited in the Syllabus.

We have received useful suggestions from many co-workers in the field of Southern history, but we are under especial obligations to Professor Charles W. Ramsdell, of the University of Texas, and Professor M. L. Bonham, Jr., of the University of Louisiana. We wish also to express our grateful acknowledgments to Miss Mildred Mell, Assistant Librarian of the University of Georgia, and to Mrs. Josephine Reid Brooks, for aid in the verification of references, in proof-reading and the indexing.
